Note: It is suggested that everything is played with capodaster at third fret (except where noted otherwise), but chords are always noted as if played without capodaster (i.e. transposed notation). ### Stand as the Khalsa

Many speak of courage, speaking cannot give it

G

It's in the face of death we must live it

e D C

When things are down and darkest, that's when we stand tallest

G

Until the last star falls, we won't give an inch at all.

e D C D

Stand as the Khalsa, strong as steel and steady as stone

G D a G D C

Give your lives to God and Guru, mind and soul, breath and bone.

G D a C e D G

Guru Arjun gave his life to stand for what was right
He was burned and tortured for fife long days and nights
He could have stopped it any time just by giving in
His strength a solid wall, He never gave an inch at all.
Sons of the Khalsa, remember those who died
Stood their ground until their last breath, so we who live now might live free lives.

A princess is not royal by her birth and blood inside
But if her family's home is Anadpur Saheb
She'll walk with such a grace and strength, the world will bow in awe
Until the mountains fall she'll never give an inch at all.
Daughters of the Khalsa, in your strength our future lies
Give your children fearless minds, to see the world through the Guru's eyes.

Baisakhi Day we were thousands, but only fife had the courage for dying
Then one brave man, one flashing sword, turned us all to lions
And now we live his legacy, to die before we fall
And like the fife who answered his call, we can't turn back at all.
Stand as the Khlasa...

The tenth Guru gave even his sons to give the Khalsa life
And his words stand like mountains against the winds of time
The Khalsa will rule the world, all will be safe in its fold
But if the Khalsa falls there won't be a world at all.
Stand as the Khlasa...

Repeat first verse and chorus

Sons of the Khalsa... (sung only by the women)

Daughters of the Khalsa... (sung only by the men)

Stand as the Khalsa, strong as steel, steady as stone.
Give our lives to God and Guru, mind and soul, are His alone.
